NO PROGRESS IS MARKED IN CASE OF LINDBERGH'S

EFFORTS INTENSE

Reports of Baby Being Seen in Various Parts All Prove Groundless

TRENTON, N. J., Mar. 14.—(INS).—No progress was reported today by police in their intensive search for the kidnapped son of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

The latest bulletin of State Police showed numerous clues had been investigated with, as yet, no definite result.

The bulletin said in part:

Two of our investigators at York, Pa., worked all day Saturday and part of Sunday and are still continuing the investigation as the result of the information which was obtained from Pennsylvania state police authorities and which leads between York and various points in New Jersey. As soon as our investigators return and make report this information will be given to the press.

We have just been informed by Captain Crawford, Tennessee, that he has detained one Jud Young and Homer Mitchell, who were accompanied by their wives and a baby answering the description of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., incidentally Mitchell was the person detained at Marion, Va., March 6 and 7th by Sheriff S. F. Dillers of Smyth County, Va. A careful investigation was made of this man who gave as his address 22 Boswell avenue, Camp Hill, Pa., and on word from people with whom he stopped at Ellington, Va., that he had arrived at their home at six p. m., Tuesday, March 1, with the baby, this man was released. Mitchell and Young are traveling in Pennsylvania car, license 7B235.

NEW YORK, Mar. 14.—(INS).—A mysterious "tip" that the kidnapped Lindbergh baby was on the vessel "City of Baltimore" due to dock today in Hamburg, Germany, was received by police here. Police immediately began a check with Hamburg.

TRENTON, N. J., Mar. 14.—(INS).—A bleak dawn today found the opening of the 13th day of the Lindbergh baby kidnapping mystery little farther advanced toward a definite solution than it was when news of it first flashed around the world.

All the intense efforts of police, underworld "go-betweens", private citizens and the frantic attempts of the parents, Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, to find a trace of the infant kidnapped from its crib in the Hopewell, N. J., home March 1, apparently all had failed.

A conference of police officials, believed to have been summoned by the famous aviator, was held in the Lindbergh home last night.

Colonel H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey state police, intimated new plans for prosecuting the quest for the recovery of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., were mapped out. He refused to give details, however.

It was understood those taking part in the discussion of fresh means to prosecute the hunt for the abductors included Major Charles Schoeffel, Schwarzkopf's assistant, Sergeant James Finn, confidential agent of Police Commissioner Mulrooney, New York, Inspector Harry Walsh, Jersey City, and Col. Henry Breckenridge, counsel and adviser to Lindbergh.

Schwarzkopf refused to say at the end of the conference whether any one or several definite persons were under suspicion.

Many clues investigated in the past 24 hours merely added to the growing list which on examination proved false.

Four persons were detained in Tennessee because they had with them a baby resembling the Lindbergh infant, but after consultation with the Lindberghs, it was definitely established the child was not the missing baby.

Incidentally, this resulted in the revelation that some definite identifying characteristic of the Lindbergh baby was not made public in the description of the child broadcast throughout the country.

"It is felt," Schwarzkopf, in his latest regular bulletin declared, "that the giving out of additional characteristics and identifications of the missing baby would not be of any advantage as the concealing of the information."

SKATER LOSES LIFE IN NESHAMINY CREEK

Young Princeton Resident Is Swept Under Ice Near Newtown

BODY IS RECOVERED

Trapped in the frigid waters of Neshaminy Creek after he had plunged through the ice while skating at the Spring Garden Dam, a mile above Newtown, Clarence S. Wilson, 21 years old, of 110 Spruce street, Princeton, was drowned yesterday.

The young man's body was taken from the water lifeless by Constable Elmer J. Rogers who worked with a set of grappling hooks for more than 20 minutes to recover it.

Wilson, with his wife and year-old son, Clarence, Jr., went to Newtown on Saturday to spend the week-end with his wife's family. Early yesterday afternoon he decided to skate and drove to the dam where nearly 100 persons were skating.

After skating for some time, near the dam Wilson ventured up the creek, crashed through the thin ice and disappeared in the swirling water beneath the ice. An alarm was sounded by the older boys at the dam and in a few minutes Constable Rogers reached the scene with a set of grappling hooks. Recovery of the body was hindered by the deep water. Boards were laid on the ice so that Rogers might reach the hole through which Wilson had disappeared.

The body was taken to a morgue at Newtown, where it was viewed by Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young.

Wilson was a graduate of the Class of 1929 of Princeton High School and for the past two years had been employed as a clerk in the office of the superintendent of grounds and buildings at Princeton Theological Seminary. He leaves his wife, who was formerly Miss Helen Summerville, socially prominent of Newtown, his son and his parents, who reside in Princeton.

PROBE DEATHS OF TWO

West Chester, Mar. 14.—A coroner's probe was under way today into a murder and suicide in Coatesville, near here, during a card game last night. Mrs. Evelyn Albright, 24-year old waitress, left the card table to get a drink of water in the kitchen. Leo Kurtz, 27, who was watching the game, followed her. He shut the kitchen door. Two shots were fired. Other participants of the game rushed into the kitchen. Both died instantly. The smoking revolver was in Kurtz's hand. Both Mrs. Albright and Kurtz were shot in the head. The shooting occurred in the home of Mrs. Otto Roberts. None of the other guests were able to give a motive for the shooting. Mrs. Albright, it was said, was estranged from her husband, Charles. She was seen several times in the company of Kurtz, who is unmarried.

No motive had been found by the Coroner for the shooting, it was said.

CONFERENCE DIFFICULTIES

Philadelphia, Mar. 14.—Difficulties encountered in the adjustment of salaries are expected to delay the re-assignment of pastors scheduled for the closing session of the 145th Annual M. E. Conference, Philadelphia District, here, this afternoon. Many of the churches in the conference have reduced the salaries of their pastors and those originally scheduled to be transferred are unwilling to accept a reduction voluntarily made by the present pastors.

Adjustment of these salaries further complicated the session in the assignment of pastors for next year and at the same time decreased the number of changes to be made this time. It is not believed that more than 80 ministers will be transferred; the smallest in years. Neither one of the four district superintendents will be moved. In the past, more than 90 changes have occurred, sometimes more than 100.

Officers Take Oscar Seachrist, 38, Into Custody — Has General Appearance of An Eccentric Individual — In First Letter He Told How He Kidnapped the Baby

A man was taken into custody shortly before noon today who admits the authorship of the threatening letter addressed to Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, which was intercepted at the Croydon post office March 4th.

The man who is being detained at the municipal building here was taken into custody this morning by Constable Thomas Crawford, Bristol Township, and Linford J. Jones, chief of Bristol police. He gives the name of Oscar Seachrist, 38, China Hall, Croydon.

Police are disposed to believe Seachrist mentally deficient. He is being examined and his room is being searched in the hope that some clue might be obtained which will fix definitely the reason for writing the letters to Lindbergh.

Seachrist, according to Constable Crawford, mailed 2 letters at Croydon last night at 8.15. One of them was addressed to Colonel Lindbergh, and the other to Father Coughlin. The one addressed to Father Coughlin requested a copy of the sermon which he delivered yesterday, and in the letter was given the name and address of the writer. The hand-writing of this letter corresponded exactly with the one addressed to Colonel Lindbergh, and thus Seachrist's arrest.

Seachrist freely admits that he has written the letters and told Crawford, Jones and Detective Russo that he had written them for excitement and to get a thrill. "I did not want any money," he said.

The man is employed at China Hall which for a number of months has been conducted as a branch of the Galilee Mission, Philadelphia, operated by George Wilkins, of Philadelphia. Seachrist, according to his own statement, has been living at the hall since 1928, and takes care of the grounds. He says his father is living in Holmesburg, and that he is one of seven children. He denies that he has ever been arrested before with the exception of once, 20 years ago, when he did five days' time for being intoxicated.

Seachrist is small of stature and has the general appearance of being eccentric. He has thick heavy black hair and heavy eye-brows, with a small black goatee, but no mustache. He was dressed in denim overalls.

The first letter written by Seachrist, according to his own admission, was addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh and requested the Colonel with his wife to meet the writer beneath the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge on Haunted Lane, Croydon, on the night of March 7th, at 8.08, which the author said was the same hour at which he had kidnapped the Lindbergh baby from the nursery in the Lindbergh home on Sourland Mountain, Tuesday evening, March 1st.

The letter was exceedingly threatening and cautioned Colonel Lindbergh that he must be accompanied to the Haunted Lane spot by his wife, and if not that the child would be killed instantly before the Colonel's wife with a 10-inch hunting knife.

The letter also told the Colonel that if he failed to appear that both he and Mrs. Lindbergh and the child would be killed on the morning of March 8th at 10.15 a. m. The letter which Seachrist mailed last evening to the Lindberghs is now en route to the Lindbergh home and New Jersey State police have been notified to be on the look-out for it.

According to Seachrist the contents of this letter are similar to the one he wrote on March 3rd.

The balance of the letter was devoted to a description of the manner in which the Lindbergh baby had been snatched from his crib, and describing the route Colonel Lindbergh was to take in order to reach the Haunted Lane bridge.

On the night of March 7th at 8.08, police took into custody a woman and two men who drove beneath the Haunted Lane bridge. The arrest created a great furor, but the trio was able to prove innocence, and the three were discharged.

THE NEWSBOY

The children's bureau of the Department of Commerce finds, as the result of a recent survey, that of all vocations and avocations in which young boys are engaged for their economic benefit, carrying newspapers and magazines is the least dangerous from a moral standpoint and among the most profitable in all other ways. In eight large cities in which the survey was conducted it was found that the newsboy fares best.

Conditions surrounding such trades as bootblackening, peddling and junk collecting by children were such as to cause the bureau to declare that they should be prohibited. But the bureau approves of the employment of boys in the delivering and selling of newspapers.

Contrary to the opinions of some well-meaning persons, the government experts found that carrying newspapers builds character. Among the newsboys was found a low percentage of truancy and juvenile delinquency. Newsboys are seldom found in the juvenile courts. In their school work carriers make better than average progress.

The average newsboy, the survey reveals, tackles the job because it appeals to him and because it pays him well. He is a hustler who works because he likes it and who, in working, generally keeps out of mischief. His work, while light, fits him for a better career after he completes his education. Many successful men earned their first dollar selling newspapers.

On the face of the record it seems a boy is safer carrying newspapers than idling away his after-school hours and summer vacation. Many parents long ago made this discovery.

PROGRESS

It is a significant fact as affecting the course of human history that mankind is only now full cognizant that it is engaged in warfare to the death with innumerable hosts of insect and germ enemies. Half the battle was won, however, when man awakened to his danger and assumed the aggressive in this truly world war.

One of the most effective agencies on humanity's side is the Rockefeller Foundation. This organization is conducting a worldwide fight against disease. Its latest report is encouraging to man for it brings good news direct from the front and from reliable sources.

In 1930 there were only three cases of yellow fever reported in the three Americas, although only a few years ago this dread tropical disease was depopulating whole areas and preventing the conquest of the New World tropics. The fever was traced to a certain species of mosquito and then a death warrant was issued for the mosquito. Today both mosquito and fever are rarities.

Malaria and the hookworm have been the South's greatest enemies. They have caused the loss of untold amounts of enterprise and accomplishment, made non-producers and dependents of countless able-bodied men and women, and stunted the physical and mental growth of generations of children. But both malaria and hookworm are on the defensive and threatened with extinction through public health measures. These battles are as well as won by man.

ation gives the family an opportunity to cross examine any one reported to have found the baby.

"The concealment of some distinctive means of identification, saves the family much inconvenience and trouble and will tend to hasten identification of the child."

One of the oddest episodes reported since the abduction was still under investigation today at York, Pa.

Dr. M. B. Shellenberger, osteopath, said a man with a sub-machine gun entered his office, demanded and received a treatment.

The patient then forced the doctor to accompany him to the waiting room, where a woman and baby sat.

"Do you recognize the baby?" the man asked Shellenberger.

When the latter looked non-plussed, the man said:

"It's the Lindbergh baby."

Shellenberger declared the man gave him a note addressed to Lindbergh. It demanded $100,000 ransom after which the baby would be delivered today or tomorrow at Bedford, Pa.

The woman and baby left while the man kept the doctor covered with his weapon.

Another unusual angle was supplied by Calvin Petty, of Kingston, about five miles from Hopewell.

He said he was approached by a stranger near his home Saturday night.

"You don't know me and I don't know you," he quoted the man as saying.

"How much would you ask to take the Lindbergh baby back to its home?"

Petty mentioned $20,000 for the service. The stranger, however, declared he would return with 100 $1 bills probably tonight.

The purpose of this week is to enable teachers from this section of the country to hear prominent lecturers and educators. These meetings are designed to fit the needs of anyone attending. There are programs especially suitable for supervisors and principals; others for teachers of reading, home economics, English, athletics, social studies, etc. There are demonstration lessons in modern languages, reading, history.

One notable feature of Thursday's program was a lecture by Tom Skehill, who is described as a poet, dramatist, and student of world affairs. He has written several books and has delivered lectures all over the country. One of his most famous books is entitled "The Last of the Long-Hunters," and his lecture was based on the events narrated there.

The last of the long-hunters was a mountain boy who could trace his ancestry back to the days of Daniel Boone, Davey Crockett, Sam Houston, and other pioneers just as well known. He developed an amazing skill in marksmanship. Mr. Skehill mentioned at this point that the mountaineer was barred from many local shooting contests because nobody could make money when he shot.

At the outbreak of the World War, this mountaineer was drafted and sent to the front. He was just an ordinary private at first, and gradually rose to the rank of corporal. Nothing would be known of him to the world if one day he had not, almost single-handed, captured a nest of 35 machine guns, taking back to the Allied lines 132 prisoners. His feat was the result of his superior skill with a "rifle-gun."

The corporal became "Sergeant" Alvin York, and received numerous citations and medals.

Mr. Skehill held the huge audience enthralled as he related in his own inimitable way the deeds of this unschooled mountaineer.

Sergeant York has, since the war, been instrumental in having erected a grade school and a high school, with modern equipment, among his own people. He realizes that his people need the educational advantages which he so lacks.

In the evening Mr. Skehill again lectured this time on George Washington as a human being. The one who introduced Tom Skehill stated that all who heard him should be better citizens, better teachers, and better human beings for having heard him. All could not help agreeing with this remark.

Junior High School Monitors

The monitors of Junior High are as follows:

From Ninth Grade: Anthony Sabatini, Bernard Churchray, James Spencer, William Wright, Virginia McIlvaine.

From Eighth Grade: William Doan, Dorothy Krames, Rose D'Amico, Freda Endom.

The monitors are changed every semester to let other pupils have this honor. Any monitor who does not do his duties is required to resign from this organization.

Ninth Grade Presents Play

Section 2 and section 5 of the ninth grade contributed toward the entertainment which was given Friday morning in assembly in honor of George Washington.

Both classes presented plays suitable to the occasion. These were coached by Miss Thomas.

The 9-2's play was entitled "A Youth On the Frontier." It is the story of Washington, the youth, who was then a surveyor in the woods of Maine.

The characters were as follows: Bessie, Irene Kontoff; Molly J. Harrier, Parr; George Washington, Bernard Churchray; Jim, Charles Lucisano; Tobias Graham, Irving Granoff; Tom Jenkins, Francis Wilson; Jeremiah Jenkins, Warren Talbot; Thunderbird, John Strong.

There was a piano solo by Margaret Morrell, and a recitation by Gustina Ryan called "The Young People of Mount Vernon."

The play which the 9-5's presented was entitled "Mother and Son."

The characters were as follows: Virginia McIlvaine, Vera Howard, Josephine Gentilucci, Lucy Pone, Grace Bono, Philip Workman, Dominic Russo, Ernest Orizzi, Alfred Fantuzzi.

CHAPTER LI

Gently Aunt Clara led her to the stairs. "Up there for you, little girl. Lie down on my bed. I'm going to entertain your precious uncle myself. Thank God for nervous headaches. You've got a beastly one. Run along." She waved the hesitating girl upstairs. "Spanish grandees are just duck soup for me, dear," she assured the girl, "especially when my plans for the day have been all shot to hell."

So it came about that Paco Morales, a moment later, was bowing over the hand of Aunt Clara and listening with polite interest to the fable of Adela's headache. Aunt Clara lost no time in making that part clear.

"Adela's in my room now. The girl is on the verge of going to pieces. I know, of course, what's passed, and if you don't mind a candid woman's opinion, I've been wondering how an intelligent man like you can at times make such a deplorable ass of himself."

Morales's thin lips parted. "She ran away," he said, "like some common peon girl."

"Of course she did, and for the same fundamental reason—love." Aunt Clara offered her guest a cigarette, then lighted one herself. "I wonder if you know how astonishing it seems to me to find you, of all men, baffled by this thing called Love. Paco Morales, I have known you—how many years is it? Ever since the major was first stationed here, and that's over thirty years. And I remember the tales of those years, the wild romances of one Paco Morales when we were all much younger than we are now, and I wonder how one can so completely forget that love, when it comes, takes us and makes us do its will. But instead of remembering that high wisdom, you have acted toward Adela as if you didn't know what youth or love or desire meant. And yet," she smiled, "and yet I've reason to believe that you did."

"Señora," interrupted the Spaniard, "it was not to talk of my youth I came here, but to bring back Adela."

The woman's voice was still patient. "You're not being wise about this, Paco Morales, and yet men call you wise, as the world goes."

"I am sorry."

"Listen. There's something of the cruelty of the beast in you. I can see it in your eyes. I tell you it is dangerous to do what you are doing. The girl is distraught, desperate. If I know Ted Radcliffe I know he would break you in two if Adela suffers at your hands. But your unspeakable pride won't let you see this. You have threatened her with exile, threatened to tear her away from the man she loves and from this land she loves, and now you're surprised that she rebels at all this."

"Si, I am surprised. Surprised and disappointed."

Impatiently she shook her head at the trite phrase. "What would parents do without that bromide? I tell you again, Paco Morales, you're not wise. You expect her to submit as a Spanish girl of your generation would have submitted. But Adela is of this generation, and America's ways lie near to her heart."

"In that case, isn't it just too bad we're not in Mexico?" said Aunt Clara.

Coldly Morales raised his hand. "Señora, again you are mistaken. I do not come to theorize. I come for Adela. Please to tell her I am here."

Aunt Clara's cigarette flared dangerously. Not often had men addressed her in just that cold, insistent tone. She fought, not too successfully, for patience.

Ignoring his command, she asked bluntly, "Just why do you object to Ted Radcliffe?"

"Object? In what sense, señora?" "You know perfectly well what I mean. Is there any good reason why he couldn't make Adela happy?"

"Is there any good reason, señora, why every American adventurer should be welcomed by me as Adela's suitor?"

Aunt Clara smiled. "I shouldn't be so sure about the adventurer part, Paco Morales. It's no secret that Ted Radcliffe will be a partner of Bob within the year."

"We waste time, señora. May I again remind you I come for Adela? And may I add that Mexican custom gives the guardian unreserved custody of the ward?"

The woman's color had heightened. "In that case, isn't it just too bad we're not in Mexico?"

Morales's eyebrows rose in polite curiosity. "I do not understand." Aunt Clara's patience had reached an end. "I mean you are now on American soil. What is more, you are on a military reservation of the United States. I mean further that Adela came to me for protection. If I gave this girl over to you, I would be lending a hand to God knows what mischance. I hoped to help her up this silly quarrel, but now I'll keep Adela here as long as she wants to stay. Yes, and now, if I weren't the well-bred wife of a high ranking officer, I'd say, 'What in hell are you going to do about it, Paco Morales?'"

Silently Morales reached for his hat and gloves. Very ceremoniously he bowed. Hand on the doorknob he turned. "I wonder, in my own turn, what Major Blount will say to all this."

Aunt Clara exhaled a cloud of cigarette smoke. "I hadn't thought about it," she answered casually. "He'll probably recommend me for the Congressional Medal."

Among the Mexican foothills, Blount had struck a hot trail.

Many times before the chase had been close, but never so promising as that night in early April. It was high time. All through the blustering Mexican winter Blount had combed the border foothills in search of El Coyote, and now, with the coming of another spring, the old soldier's temper had not sweetened by repeated failures. No one knew how much those months of disappointment had meant to the disappointed soldier. For long months the smiles of the men in Verdi had rankled.

TWO BASKETBALL TILTS TAKE PLACE AT YARDLEY

YARDLEY, Mar. 14.—Yardley high school basketball squad added another victory to its long list by defeating a team from the old scholars, Friday night, by a 21-20 score.

The alumni forward, Captain Lee-dom, found the cords for four field goals and a trio of fouls to top both teams in scoring with eleven points. Bradley with three doubles and a single, and Davis with a two-counter completed the alumni score.

Daugherty, guard, was high scorer for the school with a single and three doubles, while Gilmore netted two each for a six-point credit.

Both teams played a bang-up game which nearly ended in defeat for the school, 19-20; but Daugherty picked a loose ball off the back board in the last minutes of play and sent the oval through the nets for the deciding point.

In a preliminary contest the Yardley grammar school maids defeated the high school girls, 21-14, in I. O. O. F. hall.

TWENTY PARTICIPANTS IN A CLAY TARGET MATCH

Twenty shooters participated in the clay target shoot Saturday afternoon over the traps of the Rohm & Haas Club on the latter's grounds at Maple Beach.

The wind was blowing a gale, making the targets difficult to hit.

The scores were: H. Ratcliffe, 45; Seabold, 44; Ferry, 37; Calhoun, 33; Pfefferkorn, 26; Schriebe, 17; D. English, 22; G. Bruden, 20; W. Allen, 17; J. S. Fine, 16; E. Ratcliffe, 15; Magee, 14; R. Bruden, 14; Miller, 12; Vogel, 9; Watts, 7; Hauffmier, 4.

In a "protect your partner" shoot, R. Bruden and J. S. Fine broke 24; G. Bruden and D. English, 23; W. Allen and H. Ratcliffe, 22; Watts and Harbison, 10.

STATE NEWS

ALLENTOWN.—From the bed of the Lehigh River a steam shovel has scooped a medallion reminiscent of the bitter and colorful national campaign of 1884 when Grover Cleveland barely nosed out James G. Blaine, "the white-plumed knight," for the presidency.

George H. Gardner, local contractor, is displaying the insignia. It is the size of a quarter. On one side it bears a likeness of President Cleveland, his name, "S. Grover Cleveland," forming an arc about the head. On the other side appears a small likeness of Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, who was elected vice-president.

The word "reform" extends across the medallion in bold inscription. Below is a reproduction of part of the White House, with the date, 1885, on the bottom.

It is believed the medallion was struck in Philadelphia and was distributed as a souvenir at the time of President Cleveland's inauguration. There is a hole cut through the medallion near the rim, leading to the belief that it was used by the owner as a watch charm. How it got to the bottom of the river is a complete mystery.

Governor to Use Postals So As to Reduce Expenses

HARRISBURG, Mar. 14.—(INS)—The Governor's office will begin in the near future to answer its correspondence on postal cards as an economy measure during present unbalanced economic conditions.

The impending frugality of the executive office was disclosed today in a statement from Gov. Gifford Pinchot in which he asked recipients to "understand that the purpose is to save money for the taxpayers of Pennsylvania."

Should the scheme be found practical and money-saving, Governor Pinchot declared it would be extended to all departments under his control.

"Careful investigation shows that the ordinary letter costs the taxpayers from 15 to 25 cents apiece. The most expensive part of such a letter is the time taken in dictation, transcription, addressing, folding, filing and the stamp," the Governor's statement read.

"In the Governor's office letters are written on stationery which costs for each letter, including letterhead and envelope, only about a half-cent. It has been the habit of some offices to use extravagant stationery."

The Governor revealed he hit upon the plan of utilizing postal cards for his office correspondence after an investigation resulting from receipt of a requisition from a certain State Department for engraved letterheads in colors costing 14 cents apiece.

"To buy, print, write and mail such cards will cost only about five cents apiece, as compared with 15 or 25 cents and up for a letter. The saving to the taxpayers will be from 10 to 20 cents or more," the Governor promised.

Contract for Newtown Bridge Awarded; To Cost $47,063

HARRISBURG, Mar. 14.—A contract for a highway bridge and approaches on Traic Route 532 (Legislative Route 326), Bucks County, from bids received at the letting of February 26, has been awarded to G. A. & F. M. Wagman, of Dallastown, Pa., at $47,063.36.

This improvement, financed 100 per cent. by the State, includes a modern concrete bridge over the Neshaminy Creek connecting Newtown and Northampton townships southwest of Newtown, replacing a structure that recently collapsed. The bridge will be 275 feet long and three spans. The over-all length, including safe approaches will be 1,615 feet. The clear roadway will be 30 feet wide between curbs. It will serve traffic northeast out of Philadelphia.

Work will be started at once and the detour now in effect will carry traffic during construction. At the request of Secretary of Highways Sam Lewis, the contractors have agreed to employ local labor where possible.

NEW HOPE, Mar. 14.—At a recent meeting of New Hope borough council, two representatives of the Bell Telephone Company, Messrs. Snyder and Raleigh, were present, to submit a proposition which they state will give the borough better service and protection.

The proposal is to place a cable and do away with open wires, relocating poles. The Bell Company wishes to place 14 poles, on South Main street and eight on York Road.

Objection was made to the poles on Main street because it is so narrow in some places. No definite decision could be given on such short notice without further discussion, and it was decided to have members of Council meet Mr. Raleigh and go over the proposed line of poles and see the exact location of each pole.

Council will also get in touch with the Philadelphia Electric Company to see what arrangement can be made with regard to the use of the poles of the telephone company.
